Councilor Cooper commented on the immediate concern for moving freight and that the (EMCP) study was getting larger in scope and moving away from its original intent of how to improve the freight transportation infrastructure. Councilor Craddick responded the study included examining different modes of transportation because the EMCP was for the betterment of east metro regional transportation as a whole.

Councilor Quinby stated that at a time when funds are limited resources should be focused on the basic building blocks of the transportation infrastructure and that moving freight creates jobs.
